To whom it may concern:

This letter is an unqualified recommendation of and endorsement for James D. Edwards, D.C., F.I.C.C., regarding his services as a consulting and expert witness. I have retained Dr. Edwards as a consulting and expert witness regarding chiropractic standards of care in a handful of chiropractic defense actions before the Texas Board of Chiropractic Examiners.

In every case, it is clear that Dr. Edwards' overarching goal was to inform the court of the truth. From beginning to end, his work on each case was detailed, efficient, and prompt. His knowledge of chiropractic standards and methods was vast and impressive, but he never hesitated to immerse himself in research and outside study to assure that his opinions were sound on more esoteric matters. As a result, his pre-trial preparation always placed my clients in the position of negotiating very favorable settlements with the Board.

However, it is in the courtroom that Dr. Edwards really shined. His communication style was commanding without being oppressive, assured without being overzealous and professional without being pretentious. He took complex issues and delivered them to the court in an easily digestible manner, without appearing either condescending or simplistic. His straightforward delivery impressed without making him the star of the show. I believe that his testimony is the reason I have a 100% win rate in every case where he has testified.

It is safe to say that I will continue to use Dr. Edwards as an expert in the future for my clients' chiropractic matters. I can trust him to give me an objective analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of each case, and I consider him an important part of my chiropractic trial team.

Sincerely,

Jason Ray
